Chairs & Benches

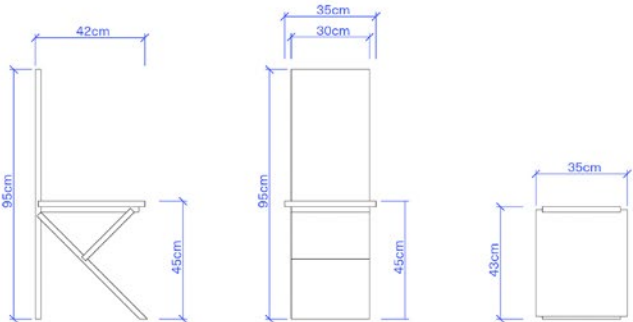

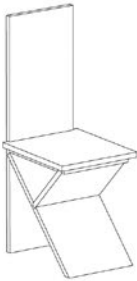

Flat Pack Chair

The Flat Pack Chair exemplifies the design language of Studio Goons: namely, our angular ease and exact playfulness. Originally designed for a show in Los Angeles, this chair could fit into a flat pack box, fly internationally as a carry-on item, and be assembled on site. Though the chair no longer fits those dimensions, its simplicity, strength, and functionality remain. Its visible joints inform the piece’s fabrication and position in a room. Four Flat Pack Chairs fit perfectly around our Simple Table, and have come to be known as the “Studio Goons Dining Set.”

Dimension 35 x 40 x 95 cm	Finish Available in all standard finishes, see page 95	Size, color, and finish are customizable.
Price €3 380,00

Lounge Chair 01

The Lounge Chair was designed to express the potential simplicity of a chair. The seat and seat back are combined into one piece, which is compressed between the arms and legs. It is therefore a chair of only two components: seat/back, and arms/legs. Inspired by classic lounge chairs, its strong, robust design appears slim and elegant from the side. The chair's assemblage is visible, as its tectonics and details are expressed clearly. Designed for comfort and seating in a living room setting, these lounge chairs are often bought in pairs.

Dimension 68 x 70 x 65 cm	Finish Available in all standard finishes, see page 95	Size, color, and finish are customizable.
	Price €3 600,00

Animals Bench

The Animals Bench is created by devising a method that interprets a classic French stool and bench typology, the kind seen across the brocantes of Paris. Instead of carving a mortise for each leg, we cut the scraps at an angle and compose them in a patchwork that captures the leg. It saves the rigorous carving and still fits tight. It holds a reclaimed leg of any dimension, so almost nothing has to be refined away. Nothing is carved to fit. The scrap keeps its shape and becomes the piece.

Brace Chair AC

Brace Chair AC (dining chair with armrests and cushions) is part of a collection designed for the solo exhibition Evolving Forms. The name Brace comes from a component of bracing systems in architecture known as a shear wall, which directly inspired the design and construction of the seating. The cushions are upholstered in pure Italian wool, offering a balance of comfort and material honesty. Alternative color options are available upon request.

J Arm Chair

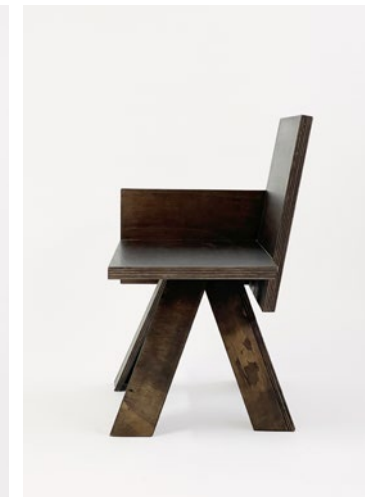

The J Arm Chair explores how a few intersecting planes can create both structure and enclosure. The seat, back, and extended arms form a precise architectural silhouette, giving the chair the presence of an armchair while remaining functional as a dining chair with armrests.

Its base is composed of two solid vertical volumes that ground the piece and hide all structural logic, allowing the form to remain clean and uninterrupted. In line with the Studio Goons approach, the J Arm Chair sits between architecture, furniture, and sculpture.

End Table Chair

Like many Studio Goons pieces, our End Table Chair was born out of personal necessity. Wanting to have a chair that provided its own extension, we extended the seat to fit a notebook, breakfast plate, or coffee mug. The chair's purpose multiplied, and therefore rewrote the rules of what a chair should be and do. This unique piece was quickly folded into the Studio Goons catalogue as a studio staple. Scrap material inspired its four splayed legs, rendering it an example of sustainable, creative design that is as efficient as it is unconventional.

Art Rocker

The Art Rocker serves as both sculptural object and functional furniture. This piece is an homage to American artist Richard Artschwager, whose works are famously and deliberately impractical. The bottom edges of this otherwise solemn form are cut out to create a playful rocker. Its natural rocking motion transforms this design-forward piece into an everyday object that can be used mindlessly. Though the rocker is not a common piece, it was imagined as an everyday utensil for our way of life, as its simple nature lends itself to idling, something we find ourselves doing in the in-between moments of our routine.

Double Bench

The Double Bench is an extended variation of the Single Bench. It was one of the first pieces that was made and sold from our studio, and therefore is a foundational form that informs our design style and ethos. By building this bench, we built Studio Goons. The bench’s frame is simple: its seat is supported by zigzag legs, equally geometric and playful. This piece fits perfectly at a dining room table. The Double Bench lends itself to custom dimensions, and has five sister designs: Single Bench (petit), Single Bench (grand), Striped Oak Bench, Standard Console, and Striped Console.

Free Plan Bench

The Free Plan Bench is based on Le Corbusier’s architectural “free plan” concept, which is one of his “Five Points of Modern Architecture.” Two planes are created: the bench seat, and the floor it rests on. Within that system of architecture, the legs can be placed in any configuration. This freed us from the typical guidelines of benchmaking. With newfound freedom, we placed the legs at unorthodox angles, and hid any structural details. There is no visible attachment between the bench’s seat and legs, which draws attention to their design, rather than their function. This piece is a perfect example of how Studio Goons’ work is an intersection of architecture, furniture, and sculpture.

Striped Oak Bench

The Striped Oak Bench is a variation on our iconic Single Bench. The frame is simple: its seat is supported by zigzag legs, equally geometric and playful. This piece is elevated by our unique hand-stripping technique. This non-traditional technique of scoring and staining requires precision, patience, and creativity, as any mistake results in destruction of the whole piece. It is a prime example of the philosophy of Studio Goons. We take risks in design, but not quality. The Striped Oak Bench lends itself to custom dimensions, and has five sister designs: Single Bench (petit), Single Bench (grand), Double Bench, Standard Console, and Striped Console.

Single Bench [petit]

The Single Bench (petit) was one of the first pieces that was made and sold from our studio, and therefore is a foundational form that informs our design style and ethos. By building this bench, we built Studio Goons. Its frame is simple and adaptable. The bench's seat is supported by zigzag legs, equally geometric and playful. Designed to fit one person, its simplicity creates plurality, and allows it to be placed in any room. The Single Bench (petit) lends itself to custom dimensions, and has also evolved into five other designs: Single Bench (grand), Striped Oak Bench, Double Bench, Standard Console, and Striped Console.

One For Me One For You Bench

One For Me One For You Bench. This is one of six models designed for the You & Me collection with Monde Singulier.

This two-level bench is created in two planes at different heights. Imagined initially for an entryway or an entrance room, for two people arriving or leaving at once, or for one person using one level as a seat and the other as a surface. The idea came from human behaviors in a constant dialogue between personal and communal spaces. A sense of play around the threshold between private and public spaces.

Made and hand-finished in our atelier in Paris.

Dimension 200 x 40 x 43 cm	Finish Available in all standard finishes, see page 95	Size, color, and finish are customizable.

Just For Me Bench

Just for Me Bench is one of six models designed for You & Me, our collection with Monde Singulier.

This is the one level bench in the group. A single plane at seat height, for one person putting on a shoe or setting something down on the way past. The name is literal. It is sized for one, where its companion is sized for two, and the pair is the argument the collection is making about entryways being shared and private at the same time.

Made in birch plywood and hand-finished in our atelier in Paris.

Standard Console

The Standard Console is the primary example of Studio Goons' design language. It was one of the first pieces that was made and sold from our studio, and therefore is a foundational form that informs our style and ethos. By building this frame, we built Studio Goons. The console's design is simple: its table is supported by zigzag legs, equally geometric and playful. From the proportion of the leg to the precision of the construction, this piece emulates our studio's approach to strong, unique, architectural furniture. The Standard Console lends itself to custom dimensions, and has five sister designs: Single Bench (petit), Single Bench (grand), Double Bench, Striped Oak Bench, and Striped Console.

M Console

The M Console is a response to the intermediary step of furniture construction. As materials are stacked in the studio, they create a repeating geometric shape. We always enjoyed the natural design of the stacked wood, and decided to create a series that celebrates the entirety of that organic, organizational process. The top of the M Console is one version of this process, and uses 45 degree angles to create a geometric silhouette, while the legs are 90 degrees. The M Capsule Collection includes the M Console and the MM Stool, and is a celebration of our constructive process.

Five Points Console

Five Points Console is part of a collection designed for the solo exhibition Evolving Forms. The collection explores adaptability and spatial flexibility through a modular dining ensemble composed of three tables, a console and two dining tables, that can be configured in nine distinct arrangements to accommodate shifting uses and environments, from dining and work to play.

‘Five Points’ comes from Le Corbusier’s five points of modern architecture (Pilotis [pillars], Free Plan, Free Facade, Horizontal Windows and Roof Garden), implemented notably in the Villa Savoye. The flexibility and structural system used to create the tables in the collection was inspired by all five points.

Foundation Console

The Foundation Console reimagines our studio's foundational forms. It is a continuation of core Studio Goons design, employing our techniques in a new context. Our iconic zigzag legs are extended vertically to create a fuller silhouette. Instead of serving as freestanding legs, they wrap the full perimeter of the console. This new shape allowed us to develop an intermediary shelf. This shelf, accessible on only one side, renders the piece two-sided, and allows for a multitude of placements and uses. This piece is the beginning of our extension into a series of free-standing shelving.

Truss Console [petit]

The Truss Console was conceived on a whim, and has since become a staple of the studio. The necessity for a new piece arose during a photoshoot, when we needed to add an item in the background of a shot. We collected different parts from around the studio to fashion a temporary stool. This practice resulted in an interesting silhouette that evolved into the Truss Console, whose name is inspired by a critical architectural component. Its structure is tectonically straightforward. A prime example of Studio Goons’ multifunctional typology, this piece is available in two sizes and can be used as a console table, bedside table, or entryway furniture.

Room Table

The Room Table began as a collaboration with a client, who asked Studio Goons to design a functional family coffee table for her living room. It was a response to her specific needs: the table had to be the right height for her children to be able to sit and draw at, but the dog had to be able to lie under and around it. After a couple of iterations, we designed a table that is both functional and sculptural. The legs are strong and sturdy, yet intriguingly varied. The top is asymmetrical, with gentle, safe corners. This piece can be used as a coffee table or elevated to the height of a typical work table.

Spill Table [bi]

The Spill Table originated as a custom piece. Designed to function as an interactive coffee table, its gentle curves recall the silhouette of a coffee spill. To create this shape, we laid out a sheet of our signature birch plywood in the client's living room, and drew directly with the client on the material to perfectly match their specifications. This form was then refined and cut in our studio. It is this type of creative collaborative process that drives and inspires Studio Goons. The Spill Table [uni] uses one finish, while the Spill Table [bi] has a black India ink tint on the legs, staying true to the original model.

You & Me Table

The You & Me Table is the entryway table in You & Me, a collection of six models designed for Monde Singulier.

You & Me is dedicated to entryway space. It was imagined with the idea of constant disruptions between personal and communal space. The entryway is the threshold from public to private, and we chose it because of its nature of unavoidable intimate or public interactions that happen while entering and exiting a home.

The table is the surface that receives all of it. Flowers, post, a bag set down for ten seconds. It is a first and last impression to a space.

Simple Table

The Simple Table is a foundational piece that expresses the strength of our chosen material: birch plywood. The name speaks for itself. This aesthetically simple piece is equally simple to make, assemble, and finish. Simplicity is also the source of its visual and physical strength. The table's structure is hidden to emphasize the design's straight lines and straightforward silhouette.

The Entry Column was born out of personal desire for doorway furniture: somewhere to put outdoor sheddings. It marks the transition from outside to inside. Alongside our M Capsule Collection, its form derives from scrap wood and incidental design.

MM Stool

The MM Stool is a response to the intermediary step of furniture construction. As materials are cut and then stacked in the studio, they create a repeating geometric shape. We always enjoyed the natural design of the stacked wood components, and decided to create a series that celebrates the entirety of that organic, organizational process. The seat of the stool is an assemblage of pieces cut at 45 degree angles. This stacking technique results in varied patterns, making each side and each corner of the stool unique. It's incidental details like this that inspire us. This versatile stool can be used as a seat, side table, or small coffee table. The M Capsule Collection includes the M Console and the MM Stool, and is a celebration of our constructive process.

Original Stool

The Original Stool was the very first piece to come out of our studio. The idea was simple: an offcut shape from the woodshop paired with scrap timber legs. These elements, organically geometric and inherently intriguing, were carefully arranged, and finished to create a unique stool. It was immediately brought home and placed in the Studio Goons living room. The stool contained some sort of magic, and it was that spark that led to the creation of Studio Goons. Since its playful beginning, the Original Stool has been duplicated many times. Every recreation is exactly the same as the original; instead of using an archived drawing, we template and copy the original stool every time to create a physical representation of the studio's origin. This strategy ensures that the design isn't diluted and therefore retains its original allure.

Totem 01
Shown in Satin Black

Totem 01

The Totem 01 is one of our most unique sculptural objects. Like many Studio Goons pieces, it was inspired by the organic, accidental geometry that is a result of the constructive process. After making many angled legs for a commissioned couch, we stacked them on a table awaiting assembly. The alternating pattern created a zigzag shape, and we immediately dubbed it a “totem,” an architectural tectonic term related to stacking objects. The totem was our first exploration into the idea of having art podiums in a house. Due to our background in exhibition work, we had built many displays for art and sculpture, but wanted to develop a series that allowed people to curate their homes in a similar manner. The Totem is often bought in sets of two or more, as the repetition of angles leads to a particularly interesting geometry for stacking and grouping. The original finish of semi-gloss black is the primary finish, but it has also been made in a gray wash color.

Corner Table

The Corner Table is the result of a studio experiment that later became an iconic Studio Goons product. While working on a series of benches, we found ourselves drawn toward the creation and modification of foundational systems. This interest launched a series of playful generation: we tried angled edges, sloped edges, rounded corners, and new joint intersections. This piece is the refined result of that exercise, and features only the most successful elements. Its geometric leg design is similar to those of the Single Bench, Double Bench, Standard Console, and Striped Console.

Building Stool

The Building Stool is one of Studio Goons' most architectural pieces. Inspired by the Nordic Pavilion of the Venice Biennale, this stool explores how interconnected vertical planes create space, light, and volume. By experimenting with these themes in a furniture medium, we found new ways to join and stack the birch plywood. The creation of this stool was a true exercise in building, testing, and modeling, which led to its unique design. It draws attention to its own construction. It's a geometrically simple piece with a bold silhouette.

Brace Stool

The Brace Stool is the smallest piece in the Brace family by Studio Goons, reducing the shear wall bracing principle to a single seated element. At stool scale there is nowhere to hide. A chair has a back and a bench has length, and both give the eye somewhere else to go. A stool is seen entirely, from every side, usually from above, and often in the middle of a room rather than against a wall. The planes that brace the stool are the stool. What holds it up is visible from every angle in the room.

The Brace family began with the Brace Chair, named for the shear wall bracing system in architecture that determined its construction. It also includes the Brace Chair A, the Brace Chair AC with cushions in pure Italian wool, and the Brace Bench. Restriction is how we work. Decide the rules, then design inside them. This stool is the point in the family where the rules were tightest.

Form Stool

The Form Stool, multifaceted and multifunctional, was born of our studio itself. Informed by reclaimed architectural wood and an amplitude of drawings, this piece is a mash of geometries. Armed with a rigid display of rectangles and corners, and softened by its seat and rounded cumulative form, this stool is woven with play and practicality. This piece's clumped legs, along with their unique style, lend an organic sturdiness to the build, while its whitewash unifies the look but is careful not to mask the grain. Sturdy but unique, organic but refined, this piece can be used as a stool, small bedside table, or end table. Its sister design, the Form Entry Table, is a taller version of this piece.
